

Stanford Lactation Space

Stanford University supports breastfeeding and pumping at work. Employees should contact their supervisor/manager, or Human Resources (HR) Manager to work out a solution to meet their breastfeeding needs. Examples of arrangements include scheduling conference rooms, using an unoccupied office (with permission), or hanging temporary blinds/curtains to create a private space. Any space that is private, lockable and is not located in a bathroom can be considered for lactation space use. Department, building, facility or space coordinators may have information about possible use of space and whom to contact for permission. Stanford University, Stanford Hospital, and Lucile Packard Children’s Hospital offer wellness rooms, listed below, that may also be available to be used for lactation purposes. Descriptions of each wellness room are included, what, if any, pumping equipment is available, and whether provisions for the appropriate storage of breast milk are provided.
