NESTA seeks articles on teaching about water in the K-12 classroom – due 1 June:

Ed Robeck, AGI's Director of Education and Outreach, announced:

"To promote high-quality education around this year's Earth Science Week theme of "Water Today and for the Future," the American Geosciences Institute \(AGI\) is working with the National Earth Science Teachers Association \(NESTA\) to solicit articles for the fall issue of NESTA's peer-reviewed quarterly journal, The Earth Scientist.

"NESTA is seeking exemplary state-of-the-art tested classroom activities and resources focused on the topic of water for K-12 Earth & Space Science educators. NESTA welcomes articles describing proven innovations in pedagogical approaches for the Earth & Space Science classroom, as well as updates on in-depth science content relevant to the K-12 Earth & Space Science curriculum."

- Interested authors should reference: Information for Authors of Articles.
- Potential articles should be sent in Word format to nestaearthscientist@gmail.com
